T WICE a year the United States government by law requires a statement of the circulation of daily newspapers covering the six months periods ending respectively on April 1 and October 1. No penalty attaches to making a false statement even under oath in this matter, and the advertising public is still obliged to judge as to the responsibility, the general standing and reputation of the newspaper making the statement. A sworn statement of circulation made to the government under this law is not necessarily true. False circulation statements have been made to the government repeatedly by certain newspapers, but the government takes no effective steps to ascertain the truth or to punish the individual making false oath in this connection. Consequently it remains with the advertiser to satisfy himself by personal investigation or by other suitable means, whether a newspaper's circulation statement to the government is true or false.
